

Mix Wave, Inc.

Company Description

Mix Wave, Inc. is a specialized trading company for audio and video equipment, established on July 7, 2006. With a mission of providing high-quality products from around the world, the company introduces innovative audio and video equipment from international manufacturers to the Japanese market and provides a wide range of products and services to content production professionals and end users.

The company operates primarily in the fields of consumer audio, professional audio, and professional video. In the consumer audio field, Mix Wave imports and distributes portable audio equipment, including earphones and headphones, from manufacturers around the world. Its products are distributed through consumer electronics retailers, specialized stores, and online channels in Japan. The company also works with overseas manufacturers on product planning and development to meet the needs of the Japanese market.

In the professional audio field, Mix Wave imports and distributes audio and music production equipment used by broadcasters, record companies, recording studios, concert venues, and other professional users. By selecting specialized products from manufacturers worldwide, the company supports a wide range of professional applications, including music production, broadcasting, and live events.

In the professional video field, the company handles specialized video equipment used for concerts, events, simulators, research and development, and high-end visualization. Its product portfolio includes solutions for high-resolution signal transmission, seamless switching, media servers, and other advanced video applications.

In addition to importing and distributing equipment, Mix Wave provides comprehensive technical support for the products it handles, including customer support, repairs, operational testing, evaluation, measurement, installation, and system adjustment. The company works closely with manufacturers and customers to identify suitable products, provide technical consultation before implementation, and support customers after installation.

Headquartered in Setagaya, Tokyo, with an additional office in Kyoto, Mix Wave serves as a bridge between global manufacturers and Japan's content production industry. By combining international products and technologies with its technical expertise and understanding of local market needs, the company aims to support the creation of high-quality audio and visual content and contribute to the development of the multimedia industry.
