Job Description

Are you passionate about building interface that turns satellite data into real-world impact?

This fast-growing space-tech startup is building a next-generation location intelligence platform that combines satellite, GPS, and IoT data to analyze how people and vehicles move through cities.

Their solution supports governments and enterprises in tackling major challenges such as disaster response, urban planning, and traffic optimization. Used by major transportation providers and infrastructure firms, their services power critical decisions around city safety, marketing, and mobility.

With continued growth, they are now urgently hiring and looking for a Frontend Engineer to join their expanding product team

Key Responsibilities

- Develop and maintain frontend systems for internal SaaS tools
- Create dynamic visualizations using maps and BI tools
- Drive UI/UX planning from scratch with a user-first approach
- Build modular, reusable components
- Work closely with cross-functional teams across engineering and consulting

Required Skills

Must-Have:

- HTML, CSS, JavaScript frontend development experience
- Hands-on experience with React, Vue.js, or Angular
- Strong TypeScript skills and Git workflow familiarity
- AWS development experience

Preferred Qualifications:

- Experience with MapLibre or other map frameworks
- Web performance optimization skills
- Basic backend/API development knowledge
- Figma experience or UI/UX design understanding
- Business Japanese level

What makes this opportunity stand out:

- International Team & English-Speaking Environment: Work alongside a diverse team in a company that values global perspectives.
- Hybrid Work & Flex-Time: Enjoy the flexibility of no-core hours working hours and working from home up to 3–4 days a week.
- Fast-Track Your Career: In this small, agile team with flat hierarchies, your contributions won't just be noticed—they'll be game-changing.
