Job Description

A global oil and energy company is looking for a Supply Planner Manager. The selected candidate will lead end-to-end supply, production, and raw material planning to optimise inventory, ensure availability, and resolve supply constraints across the network. This is a hybrid role.

With a global workforce of thousands, this multinational oil company offers a broad range of career opportunities for skilled talent across multiple disciplines. They have an expansive global reach and their gas stations can be found across multiple regions. This is a prosperous company to join for those who would like to work alongside other industry experts.
