募集要項

COMPANY OVERVIEW

A Japanese independent IT company that provides software products and solutions, with a particular strength in development support tools.

Their goal is to help companies and users succeed based on their philosophy of "Helping the world."

They provide a variety of solutions to improve digital operations in a wide range of industries and occupations by proactively incorporating no-code and low-code technologies that enable system construction without IT expertise and software development support tools that have sold a cumulative total of 1.2 million licenses. They also have more than 30 years of experience in providing business systems that support school management, which have been introduced in more than 3,600 private schools nationwide, and business systems for nursery schools and other social welfare facilities.

JOB RESPONSIBILITIES

You will be responsible for selling licenses of their SaaS products in front-end development to the customer's IT department

(engineers) and C-level, while working closely with their marketing and development departments. This position is expected to be a management candidate with subordinates in the future.

.NET and JavaScript languages used behind the scenes, for example, their software is used by bank traders to process bulk data in real time, or components that process huge amounts of data for selling and buying, so they also need to have such technical conversations with their customers' developers.NET and JavaScript languages used behind the scenes.
